

At Home with Apartheid: The Hidden Landscapes of Domestic Service in Johannesburg

Rebecca Ginsburg

DOC | *audiobook | ebooks | Download PDF | ePub

DOWNLOAD

READ ONLINE

#2694241 in Books Rebecca Ginsburg 2011-08-30 Original language: English PDF # 1 9.24 x .87 x 6.371, 1.06 #File Name: 0813928885248 pages At Home with Apartheid | File size: 48.Mb

Rebecca Ginsburg : At Home with Apartheid: The Hidden Landscapes of Domestic Service in Johannesburg before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised At Home with Apartheid: The Hidden Landscapes of Domestic Service in Johannesburg:

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. fascinating By NICK HAINES It's remarkable how this system could last so long. What I was looking for and this book delivered, was the specificity of what day to day life was actually like.

Despite their peaceful, bucolic appearance, the tree-lined streets of South African suburbia were no refuge from the racial tensions and indignities of apartheid's most repressive years. In At Home with Apartheid, Rebecca Ginsburg provides an intimate examination of the cultural landscapes of Johannesburg's middle- and upper-middle-class neighborhoods during the height of apartheid (c. 1960-1975) and incorporates recent scholarship on gender, the home, and family. More subtly but no less significantly than factory floors, squatter camps, prisons, and courtrooms, the homes of white South Africans were sites of important contests between white privilege and black aspiration. Subtle negotiations within the domestic sphere between white, mostly female, householders and their black domestic workers, also primarily women, played out over and around this space. These seemingly mundane, private conflicts were part of larger contemporary struggles between whites and blacks over territory and power. Ginsburg gives special attention to the distinct social and racial geographies produced by the workers' detached living quarters, designed by builders and architects as landscape complements to the main houses. Ranch houses, Italianate villas, modernist cubes, and Victorian bungalows filled Johannesburg's suburbs. What distinguished these neighborhoods from their precedents in the United States or the United Kingdom was the presence of the ubiquitous back rooms and of the African women who inhabited them in these otherwise exclusively white areas. The author conducted more than seventy-five personal interviews for this book, an approach that sets it apart from other architectural histories. In addition to these oral accounts, Ginsburg draws from plans, drawings, and onsite analysis of the physical properties themselves. While the issues addressed span the disciplines of South African and architectural history, feminist studies, material culture studies, and psychology, the book's strong narrative, powerful oral histories, and compelling subject matter bring the neighborhoods and residents it examines vividly to life.

It is critical to add work of this type to the corpus of literature on South African cities, and I warmly welcome this contribution. The issues raised here are enormously important to many South African women. The scholarship represented here is in my view excellent; the engagement with the literatures is good, and the research is extremely interesting and well constructed. Important, original, and enjoyable. (Alan Mabin, University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg) At Home with Apartheid is at once modest in spirit and profound in effect. Rebecca Ginsburg's meticulous scholarship and her ability to allow her informants to speak for themselves create an unforgettable portrait of apartheid from the inside, one that vividly demonstrates the role of mundane domestic spaces in shaping the moral and social experiences of the South African racial order. This is a major landmark in the growing field of race and space studies. (Dell Upton, University of California, Los Angeles) About the Author Rebecca Ginsburg is Associate Professor of Landscape Architecture at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign.