Brian Pusser : Burning Down the House (Suny Series in Frontiers in Education) (Suny Series, Frontiers in Education) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Burning Down the House (Suny Series in Frontiers in Education) (Suny Series, Frontiers in Education):

Burning Down the House presents a riveting analysis of one of the most nationally prominent and bitterly contested policy battles in the history of American higher education: the struggle to eliminate affirmative action at the University of California. A timely and essential addition to the literature on affirmative action, it examines the political, economic, legal, and organizational factors that shaped the debate in California and offers unique insight into the contemporary politics of admissions policy, university governance, and the role of higher education in broader state and national political contests to come.

"This is a very detailed depiction of the complexities of higher education policymaking. The author's skill in presenting the central characters as complex individuals will attract both opponents and advocates of affirmative action."From the Back CoverBurning Down the House presents a riveting analysis of one of the most nationally prominent and bitterly contested policy battles in the history of American higher education: the struggle to eliminate affirmative action at the University of California.
