Mirka Bene, Michael G. Lee : Clio in the Italian Garden: Twenty-First-Century Studies in Historical Methods and Theoretical Perspectives before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Clio in the Italian Garden: Twenty-First-Century Studies in Historical Methods and Theoretical Perspectives:

Italian gardens have received more attention from historians than perhaps any other garden tradition. This volume presents eight richly illustrated essays by established and emerging scholars that suggest striking new directions, both quantitative and methodological, for future research.

About the Author Mirka Bene is Associate Professor of Landscape Architecture in the School of Architecture at the University of Texas at Austin. Michael G. Lee is the Reuben M. Rainey Chair in the History of Landscape Architecture at the University of Virginia.
